YEAR OF FAITH

Is It Natural to Desire God?

To outsiders, religious people can seem like entirely different kinds of people – a bit strange sometimes, fanatics to some, archaic at times, and a bit superstitious.

This is all to say that, to some people, religious beliefs are thought to work like emotions. That is, sometimes you get sad, and sometimes you don't. Some days you feel this way, and some days you feel that way. Some people are happy, and others aren't. They conclude: some people believe in God – this god or that god – and others don't. There are all sorts of opinions and all sorts of people.

However, the answer to today's "Are You Smarter than a Fifth-Grader?" question clarifies the true nature of the desire that human beings have for God.

The reality is that all human beings have a natural desire for God. The desire in our hearts for God does not come from any mere or passing conversation we might have with our friends, nor does this desire for God well up in our hearts principally from an inspiring book we've just read, or from a movie. The desire that human beings can and do have for God is not like an emotion – it's not a fleeting sensibility that some have and others don't. The desire for God is written into our very nature as human beings. Every single person has it.

The Catechism of the Catholic Church has this to say: "The desire for God is written in the human heart, because man is created by God and for God; and God never ceases to draw man to himself. Only in God will he find the truth and happiness he never stops searching for" (CCC 27).

If we are honest with ourselves, we recognize that there is a hunger for the Truth deep in our hearts. It is not just in some of us; it is deep in the heart of every human being. It is our desire for the infinite, the perfect, and for Love itself. We desire to experience the fullness to which we are called, but this fullness can only be fulfilled in God.

The Second Vatican Council said it this way: "The dignity of man rests above all on the fact that he is called to communion with God. This invitation to converse with God is addressed to man as soon as he comes into being. For if man exists it is because God has created him through love, and through love continues to hold him in existence. He cannot live fully according to truth unless he freely acknowledges that love and entrusts himself to his creator." (Gaudium et Spes, no. 19)

Love allows us to reach from the confines of our own limitations and connects us to its very source, who is God Himself.

Saint Augustine said it best: "Our hearts are restless until they rest in Thee, O Lord." an additional gift: the ability to give all of it back to Him in love.

The Season of Announcements

Announcement to Mary

The Second Sunday of the Season of Announcements commemorates the announcement to Mary that she is to be the mother of God. The feast actually recalls two aspects of the same salvific mystery: the incarnation of the divine Word and the motherhood of Mary. For this reason, the feast was given different names according to the aspect which was being emphasized. With time, the Incarnation of the Son of God was stressed on the Feast of the Birth of our Lord and today's feast became a Marian feast.

This great announcement to Mary, the fulfillment of the promises of the prophets, took place in the humble home of Mary in Nazareth. At the time, Mary was probably between fourteen and sixteen. Again it was Gabriel, the messenger of the end times, who brought the wonderful message to the young girl.

In many ways, the announcement to Mary can be compared to the announcement to Zechariah. Both apparitions took place during the day and both Zechariah and Mary were to be found at prayer. Mary, the Queen, is speaking with her Lord in her own home. It was necessary for Zechariah to go to the Temple and encounter the Lord in the holy of holies. When the angel appeared to Zechariah, he was described as "standing". During the announcement to Mary, the angel greets her with signs of respect, gives her the good news and departs. He is not described as "standing". The angel himself praises Mary, "You have found favor with God."

In the name of all of humanity, Mary consented to be the instrument through which salvation was to be brought into the world. One recalls Eve, who consented to bring darkness and sin into the world. With Mary, the New Eve, salvation history is at a turning point. She is to be the "Mother of the Light."
